PREFACE

The aim of the Friday Evening Melodies is to present to the Jewish public a volume of sacred songs intended for use in the Synagogue, school, and home, and especially adopted to the needs of children's choirs.

Most of the ''melodies'' contained in this collection are the original contributions of the composers to the field of Synagogue music. Although appearing now for the first time in printed form, these compositions have for a number of years been sung with marked success by the choirs and schools of the Bureau of Jewish Education of New York, and are by now familiar to thousands of Jewish boys and girls in the City of New York.

In preparing these songs, the composers took particular care to make them simple in form, traditional in character, Jewish in spirit, easy to learn, and within the range of children's voices. A simple piano accompaniment has been added to facilitate rehearsals and to make the songs available for use at school assemblies and for home practice. The Hebrew text, printed in large clear type has been inserted in order to enhance the usefulness of the book as a Hymnal at Junior services. A transliteration of the Hebrew text has also been provided.

Throughout this collection the composers have adhered to a definite plan—that of presenting Jewish traditional ''Prayer motive,'' in a modern musical setting. It is well known to all students of Jewish liturgical music, that the music of the Synagogue as we have it today, may be said to consist of two distinct kinds. (1) On the one hand we have the music of the Eastern-European Jew distinguished by its warmth and impetuosity, and characterized by its soul-stirring, tragic and melancholy elements. This music which may still be heard in most Orthodox Synagogues in America is of oriental origin and bears all the earmarks of the ''Goluth.'' (2) On the other hand we have the music of the Western-European Jew known by its calm, deliberate, orderly and dignified style, and recognized by its well-calculated, mathematical and classical structure. This music may be heard in the more progressive Synagogues and reformed Temples and bears the insignia of Israel Emancipated. Too often have the makers of our liturgic music gone to one extreme or the other. The ones disregarding every rudiment of rhythm, melodic scheme and harmonic structure in their eagerness to express freely and unreservedly the anguish of Jewish suffering; the others sacrificing much of the Jewish spirit for the sake of external beauty and harmonic form.

It is the blending of these two tendencies in Jewish liturgic music that the composers of the Friday Evening Melodies have endeavored to effect—the presentation of Jewish traditional ''Prayer motive'' draped in a modern musical garb.

In presenting this collection of Friday Evening Melodies to the public, the composers feel that they have rendered a service to the community and that they have supplied a long-felt need in its religious life. It is their sincere hope that this humble contribution may help, though it be in the smallest measure, to restore to the Synagogue, school and home the inspiring and edifying influence of music which has universally been recognized as one of the greatest aids in stimulating public and private devotion and in strengthening those religious, social and home ties that promote unity and brotherhood among men.
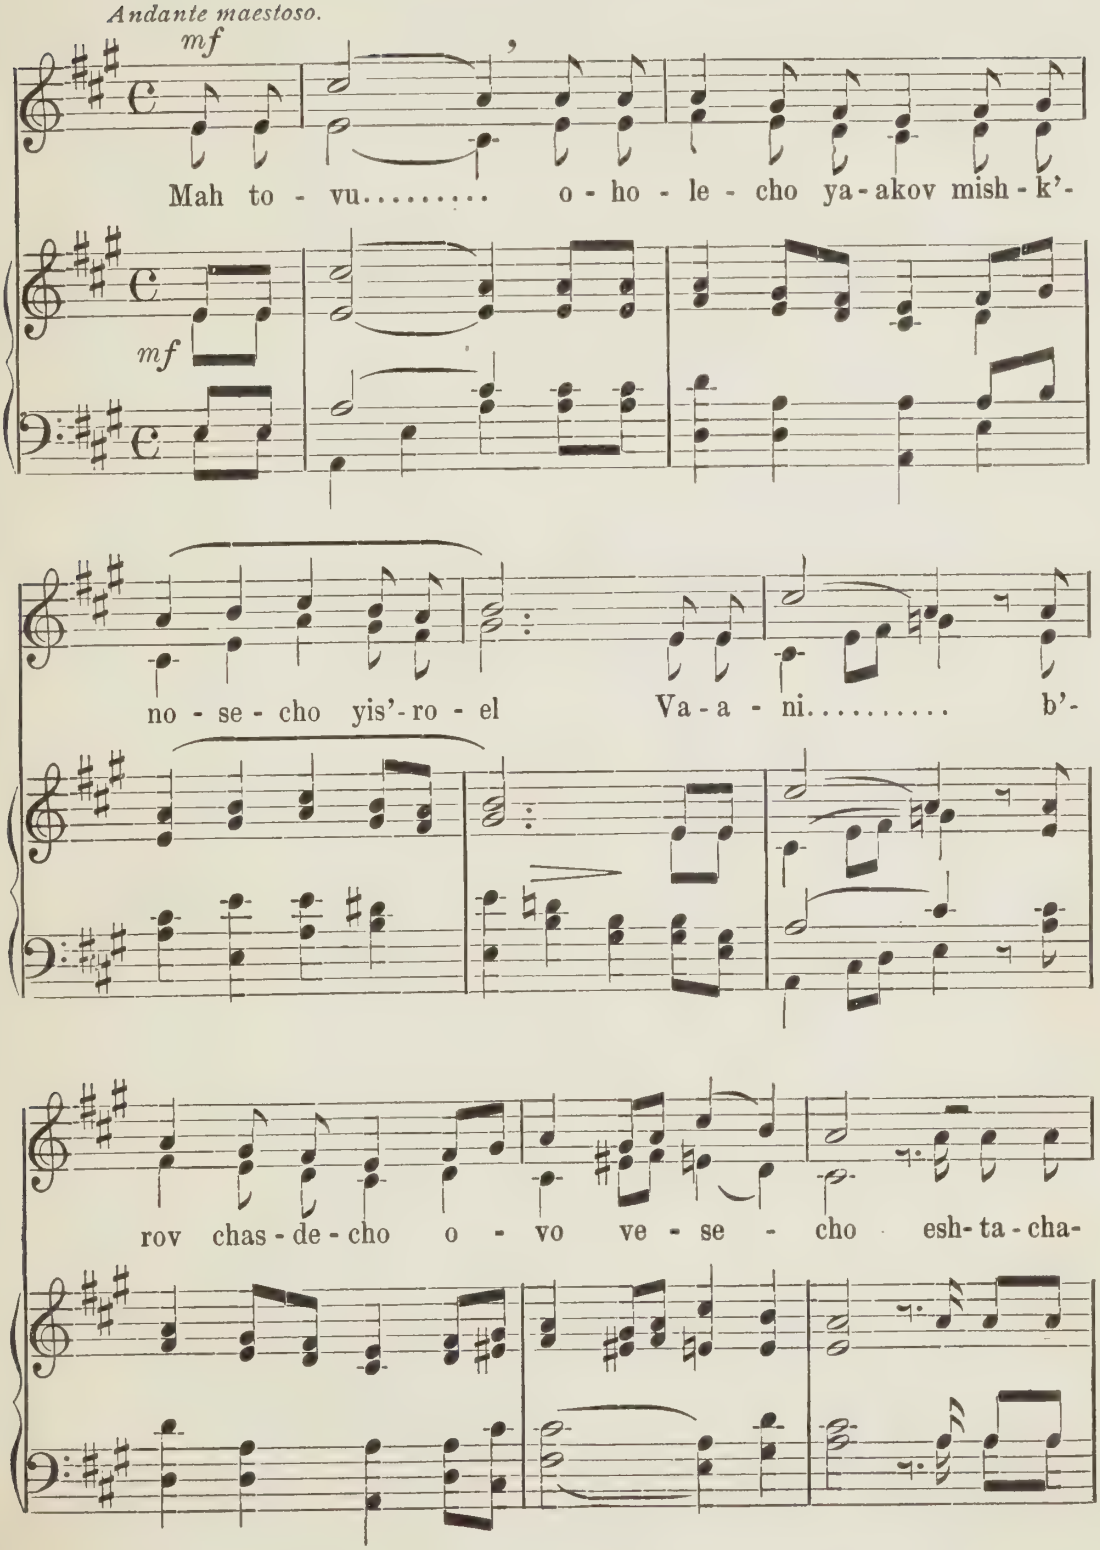

In conclusion the composers wish to acknowledge their indebtedness to Daniel Gregory Mason Associate Professor of Music at Columbia University, and to William J. Kraft, Associate in Music at Teachers' College Columbia University, for their kind and helpful suggestions.
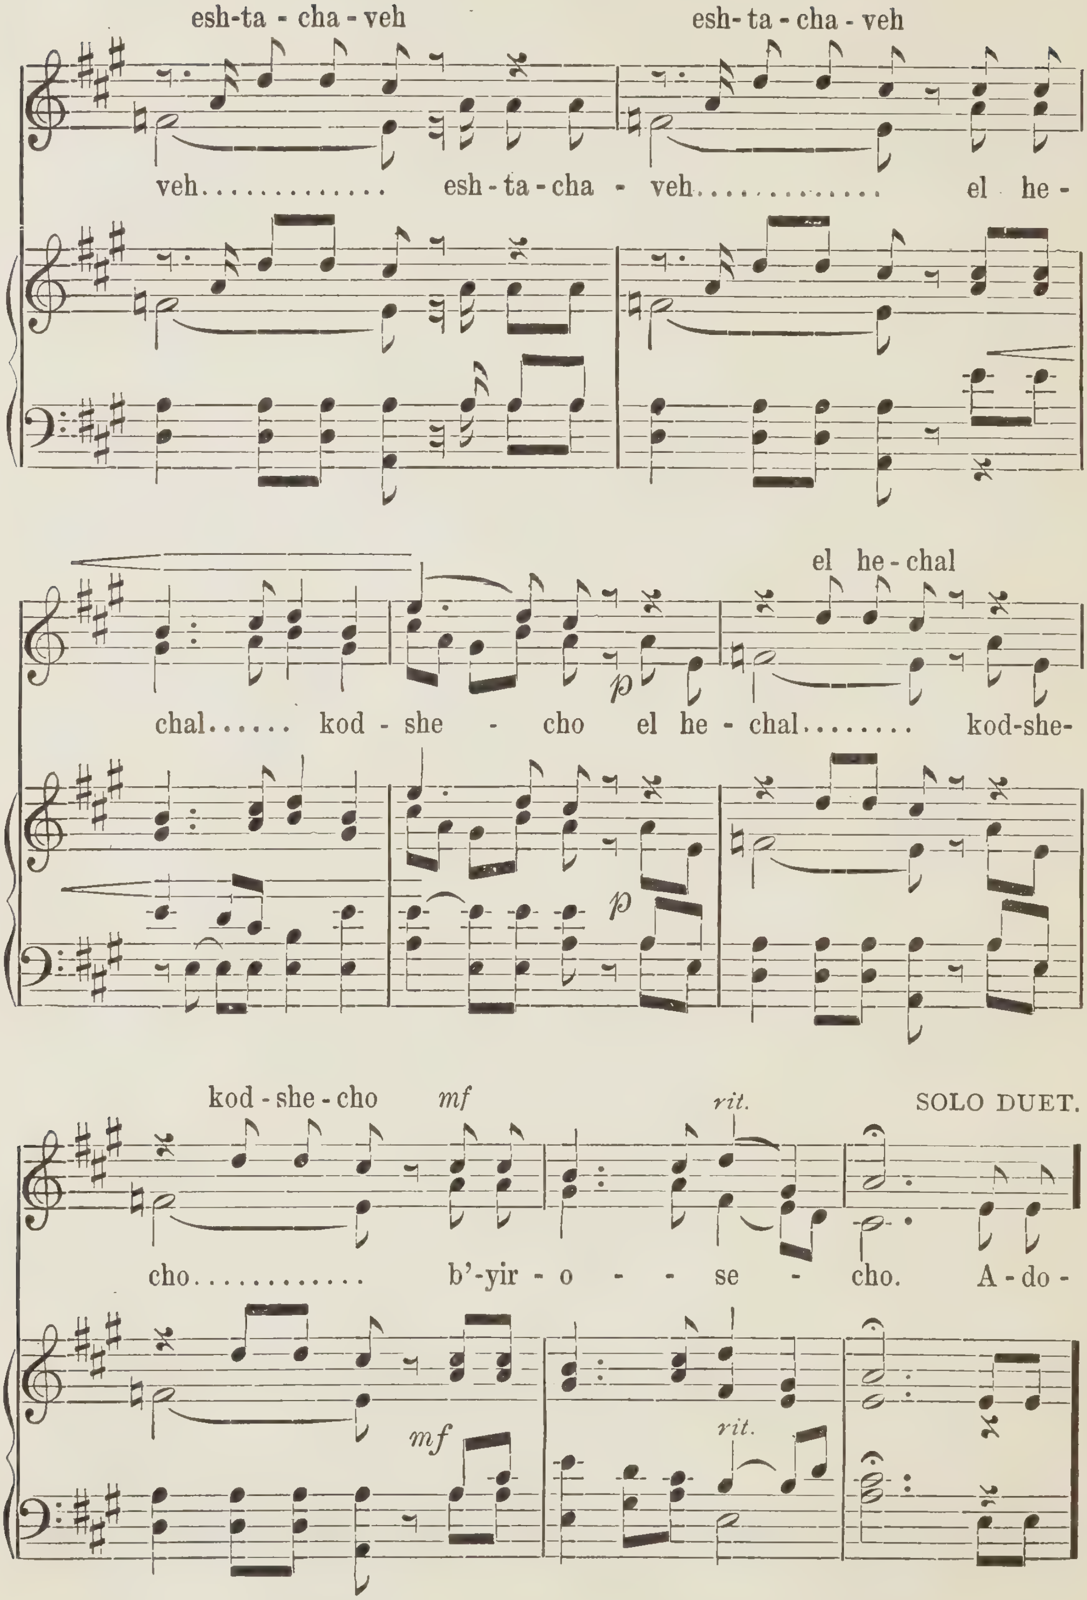

THE COMPOSERS.
